LEARNER COHORT
Whilst there are no entry requirements or prerequisites for new entrants into the course, new learners will find the course more achievable if they possess soft skills such as empathy, suspending judgement and unconditional positive regard.

It is not a requirement, but would be advantageous for learners to have experience or prior knowledge working with people who are culturally or linguistically diverse. The new learner will discuss their previous experiences and share their attitude towards the sector during pre-enrolment discussions in order that they understand these elements that will assist the acceptance of the concepts and issues trained in the course. Learners with an appropriate approach to the empathy and caring requirements of the child, youth and family intervention role will be processed through to the next step in the enrolment process.

Learners enrolling into the child, youth and family intervention diploma may have limited recent experience in the industry or are looking to pursue a career in the child, youth and family intervention field. More experienced learners enrolling into the course may wish to apply for Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL), which in turn may affect the duration and cost of the course.

Learners enrolling in to this course will need to follow Australis College LLN processes. Learners enrolling in this course will be required to pass a national police check.
